

Neuroqueer rhetorics: Gazes, spaces, & relationships

Neuroqueer-identified and neuroqueer-friendly resources

Shared Spaces

Neuroqueer (<http://neuroqueer.blogspot.com/>). “Queering our neurodivergence, neurodiversifying our queer.” (Blog Editor: Elizabeth J. Grace; Recently added: Nick Walker, Michael Scott Monje Jr.)

- The NQ blog serves as a shared space and platform for NQ-identified activists, bloggers, academics, and interested individuals to share their work during the run-up to the launch of an official Neuroqueer journal.
- Information on the upcoming Neuroqueer: The Journal of Identity, Expression, and Self-Definition and the “What is Neuroqueer?” call for papers are both available here.
- Notable and recurring contributors: Elizabeth Grace, Corbett Joan O’Toole, Elizabeth Hassler, Barbara Ruth, Kylie Brooks, Tasha Raella, Alyssa Hillary, Julia Bascom, Phil Smith, Michael Scott Monje, Jr., Melanie Yergeau, Amy Sequenzia, E. Lewy, Zach Richter, Kassiane Sibley.

Barking Sycamores (<http://barkingsycamores.wordpress.com/>). “Neurodivergent literature and its craft.” (Editor-in-chief Nicole Nicholson; Assistant Editor-in-chief V. Solomon Maday)

- “Barking Sycamores is a literary journal whose primary mission is to publish poetry and short fiction by emerging and established writers who are neurodivergent — this includes autism, the state of being currently known as AD(H)D, bipolar, synesthesia, and so on.”
- While not explicitly a neuroqueer/queer space, Barking Sycamores has proven to be a friendly space for neuroqueer poets and essayists. Neuroqueer contributors include: Barbara Ruth, Michael Scott Monje Jr., Tasha Chemel, Elizabeth J. Grace.

The Neurotropes Blog (<http://www.neurotropes.com>). “Toward a Neuroqueer literary theory.” (Managing Editor: Michael Scott Monje Jr.)

- The goal of Neurotropes is to connect neurodivergent media critics with intersectional, race- and gender-critical interpretations of various arts and entertainment genres, including television, video games, literature, and movies.
- While still in its formative stages, Neurotropes is actively recruiting regular contributors and accepting submissions for guest posts/single reviews. See the “Write for Us” tab on the site or email submissions to michaelscott@neurotropes.com. Neurotropes specifically seeks to recruit a diverse range of disabled/crip/Queer/neurodivergent voices.

Individual Blogs

Neurocosmopolitanism: <http://neurocosmopolitanism.com/>
Shaping Clay: <http://www.mmonjejr.com>
Yes, That Too: <http://yesthattoo.blogspot.com>

Selected bibliography

- Bienvenu, M. (2007). Queer as deaf: Intersections. In Open your eyes: Deaf studies talking. Minneapolis: University of Minnesota Press.
- DiGrazia, J., & Rosenberg, L. (2012). No one wants to go there: Resilience, denial, and possibilities for queering the writing classroom. In E. A. Flynn, P. Sotirin, & A. Brady (Eds.), Feminist rhetorical resilience (pp. 211–240). Logan, UT: Utah State.
- E. (2012, January 3). On (a)sexuality [Blog]. Retrieved from <http://thethirdglance.wordpress.com/2012/01/03/on-asexuality/>
- Galloway, T. (2009). Mean little deaf queer: A memoir. Boston: Beacon Press.
- Groner, R. (2012). Sex as “Spock”: Autism, sexuality, and autobiographical narrative. In Robert McRuer & Anna Mollow (Eds.), Sex and disability (pp. 263–281). Durham: Duke University Press.
- Hillary, A. (2014). The erasure of queer autistic people. In C. Wood (Ed.), Criptiques (pp. 121–146). Lexington, KY: May Day Publishing.
- Hirschmann, N. J. (2013). Queer/fear: Disability, sexuality, and the other. Journal of Medical Humanities, 34(2), 139–147.
- Kafer, A. (2013). Feminist, queer, crip. Bloomington: Indiana University Press.
- McGee, M. (2013). Cruel optimism for the neurologically queer. Social Text: Periscope. Retrieved from http://socialtextjournal.org/periscope_article/cruel-optimism-for-the-neurologically-queer/
- McRuer, R. (2006). Crip theory: Cultural signs of queerness and disability. New York: NYU.
- Pritchard, E. D. (2013). For colored kids who committed suicide, our outrage isn’t enough: Queer youth of color, bullying, and the discursive limits of identity and safety. Harvard Educational Review, 83(2), 320–345.
- Rawson, K. J. (2010). Queering feminist rhetorical canonization. In E. E. Schell & K. J. Rawson (Eds.), Rhetorica in motion: Feminist rhetorical methods and methodologies (pp. 39–52). Pittsburgh: University of Pittsburgh Press.
- Richter, Z. (2013, May 1). On the erasure of queer autistics: What it feels like to be erased and haunted [Blog]. Retrieved from <http://stimstammersandwinks.blogspot.com/2013/05/on-erasure-of-queer-autistics-what-it.html>
- Tatum, E. (2013, July 16). Misadventures in queer lady dating while disabled: It’s not me, it’s you [blog]. Retrieved from <http://www.autostraddle.com/misadventures-in-queer-lady-dating-while-disabled-its-not-me-its-you-175782/>